* The eight coins, numbered 7693 down to 9051, have no Greek legends on them. The obverse of the coins has an image very much similar to the coins of Bazo Deo which have Greek legends. These coins come from Sijistan, one of the homes of the Scythians. They are given here from want of reliable data which would enable us to put them with certainty in their own proper place. They are probably later than the time of Bazo Deo. In some Sassanian influence is discernible. In others the letters are ranged Gupta fashion.

†13458 s. 57·5 0·72	Laureate head of emperor to r. Reading from outside: "CÆSAR AUGUSTUS DIVI F. PATER PATRIÆ."	Two figures draped, each holding a spear and a round shield which rests on the ground. Reading from outside: "AUGUSTI JUVENT." In exergue "CÆSARES."
†13459 s. 57·5 0·75	do.	do.

* These two coins look like copies. If real, they are denarii of Marcus Porcius Laeca who in the year of Rome 454 carried the law which gave to Roman citizens exemption, on appeal, from the ignominious punishment of scourging. "The quadriga which so frequently occurs on coins of Roman families does not relate to the honours of the triumph" (Stevenson). See Journal, Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. LIX, Plate VI, fig. 1, and E. Babelow's Monnaies de la République Romaine, 1886, To. II, p. 369.

† Both these coins are poor. The full inscription on the reverse is: "C. L. CÆSARES AUGUSTI F. COS. DESIG. PRINC. JUVENT.," which is the abbreviated form of "Caius et Lucius Cæsares Augusti Filii Consules Designati Principes Juventutis" (Stevenson). Caius and Lucius were sons of the great admiral and general, Agrippa, and were adopted by Augustus B. C. 17. As Lucius was designated consul in B. C. 8 these coins could not have been struck before that date. Augustus received the title of Pater Patriæ in B. C. 2. Caius was actual consul in A. D. 1. So these coins were struck probably in the year of Christ's birth.

* This is not a coin of Charles III. who began to reign in 1759. It must be one struck by Charles, Archduke of Austria, who claimed the throne, and whose claim was the cause of the Spanish War of Succession. The style of the coins is quite different from that of those of the kings of Spain, but he calls himself Charles III., king of Spain, Charles II. having reigned from 1665 to 1700, A. D. 1711 neither falls in the reign of Charles II. or of Charles III.; the latter king reigned from 1759 to 1788.
